

I oppose the Consumer Banks Association request to use an established business relationship to call individuals. Many of these conglomerates have a huge number of product lines which have no intrinsic relationship to each other. If I am a customer of one of their product lines, that does not indicate any likelihood that I would have any interest in their other product lines.